GREAT COLORADO PROJECT IS OUTLINED BY MAXWELL AT RECLAMATION MEETING

In one of the largest and most enthusiastic hearings ever held in Phoenix to listen to a speaker whose subject was the development of the natural resources of the Southwest, George H. Maxwell, representing the National Reclamation association, yesterday outlined a plan for the development of the Colorado river which engrossed the attention of his audience for almost two hours.

The meeting was held at the Hotel Adams, where the National Reclamation association, more than 150 of the most prominent men of the Salt River valley were in attendance and Mr. Maxwell's summary of his plan was looked upon as a most sane and practicable solution of this great problem.

W. W. Pace of Thatcher, who has served in both houses of the Arizona legislature and is now president of the United States Waterways association, was chairman of the meeting. In introducing Mr. Maxwell, Mr. Pace referred to his service in the field of reclamation development.

Reports On Bill
In opening his remarks Mr. Maxwell said that he had spent the last three months in making a progress report to the members of the National Reclamation association who were present. He said that the progress made in the last few months, progress had been made in months equal to the progress made in years in the original campaign.

The three points to which he referred in his report were: First, the Bankhead bill, which would create a fund of $500,000,000 for the construction of reclamation work; second, the Colorado river and the plan for its utilization which will attain the best results for the people of the whole United States; and third, the River City, two brothers, Wilfred and Wayne, and a host of relatives and friends.

The impossibility of passing any bill not a national measure was clearly explained by the speaker. He said that the Bankhead bill, which was introduced in the House of Representatives, had been amended to make it a national bill, bringing it into the same class as the Bankhead bill. The two bills are now before the house committee on reclamation.

There are few states in the union, if any, said Mr. Maxwell, which will not participate in the benefits of this new great enlargement of the reclamation program. It is a tremendous stake in it, because under the provisions of the Bankhead bill, the state that cannot be built by the national government, as the Roosevelt project was built. The details of his report were fully explained by the chief features of the measure being its improved plan for securing investment and return on the government's original investment, through the formation of an irrigation district and the placing of the reclamation work in the hands of the people.

The Riverside conference. The account given by Mr. Maxwell of the Riverside convention was very interesting. He said that he had a good deal of experience with conventions and that he thought there was about as much to be learned from the Riverside conference as from any other conference of the kind. He said that the Riverside conference was a very successful one, and that it had been attended by a large number of the most prominent men of the Southwest.

The address of Mr. Maxwell was a complete resume of a great comprehensive plan for the highest possible utilization of all the resources of the Colorado river for both reclamation and power. He said, however, that the immediate necessity for the protection for the Imperial valley transcended any other aspect of the question. At the Riverside convention he had urged the immediate construction of the Sentinel reservoir to protect the Imperial valley against any possibility of danger from the Gila. The reservoir could ultimately be used as a storage reservoir, being filled, not from the Gila, but from the Colorado river.

The respective uses of flood control, reclamation and power dams were fully explained. The flood control reservoir should be kept empty whenever possible. The reclamation storage dam should be kept full, and the power dam should be kept full. The power dam should be kept full, and the reclamation storage dam should be kept full. The power dam should be kept full, and the reclamation storage dam should be kept full.

MANY RESERVATIONS MADE FOR AD CLUB MEETING TOMORROW

Local organizations and individuals have made a large number of reservations for the Advertising club luncheon and meeting to be held at the Hotel Adams tomorrow, with Charles Henry Mackintosh, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, as guest of honor and chief speaker. The committee in charge of the meeting reported yesterday that the Ad club, Rotary club, Kiwanis club, Realtors association, Merchants and Manufacturers' association, Business and Professional Women's club, Century club and W. C. T. U. had sent in most of their reservation cards, assuring a large attendance at the luncheon.

The meeting tomorrow will mark the first visit to Phoenix of Mr. Mackintosh, who is one of the best known advertising men in this country. Besides being president of the Associated Advertising clubs, he is secretary of sales and advertising for Leslie Extension university of Chicago. He had abandoned his desk to devote a year to visiting every advertising organization in the United States in an effort to bring about better merchandising and advertising.

In his address on "Advertising and Merchandising" tomorrow Mr. Mackintosh will touch upon every phase of that broad subject, making his talk one of importance to every business man and woman in the city. Entertainment will be provided in the form of two solos by Helen Boyle Haworth and comedy numbers by Baron von Senden.

The luncheon committee requests that those who have not made their reservations do so at once, so that adequate accommodations for all may be provided. Reservations may be made by telephoning L. A. Weiss, 4622.

HOME FOR FEEBLE MINDED SUGGESTED

Dr. Thomas Haines, who is directing the mental hygiene survey of the state, yesterday recommended to the state child welfare board that it get behind a movement for a home for the feeble-minded. Dr. Haines appeared before the board at its request to advise the members how to care for the mentally deficient who come under its jurisdiction.

Mrs. H. A. Guld, secretary of the board, not only approves the suggestion made by Dr. Haines, but she hopes will be brought to the attention of the legislature, but also advocates the establishment of a "preventorium" in every county, that the children inclined toward tuberculosis might receive special care.

In many of the counties provision is made for the education of children who need special care, said Mrs. Guld. She is in favor of these children being placed in a "preventorium" in every county, that the children inclined toward tuberculosis might receive special care.

On motion of Paul Melvor, assistant county attorney, Judge Stanford set the time for hearing arguments to the demurrer for Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Lewis has not been arrested on the charge yet, but is thought to be in Chicago. Rosa and Lewis are charged in the indictment with conspiring together to obstruct the administration of the state laws by placing more state funds in the Central bank of Wickenburg than the bond of the bank permitted.
